Eight years of 'Labour of Indifference' to inaugurate this ESI building which should have been a 'Labour of Love' for any Welfare State

Mysuru, Nov. 28 (RK&DM)- With Union Minister of State for Labour and Employment Santosh Kumar Gangwar failing to turn up, State Labour Minister Venkataramanappa inaugurated the renovated 100-bed ESI Hospital (Employees State Insurance Corporation Hospital) on KRS Road in city this morning.

Speaking on the occasion, Venkataramanappa said that the hospital renovation began after the demolition of the old structure, with the then Union Minister for Labour and Employment Mallikarjuna Kharge laying the foundation stone for the new building on Feb. 19, 2011 when UPA Government was in power at the Centre.

Urging the Central Government to grant more funds for installation of modern medical equipment, Venkataramanappa said that the Karnataka Public Service Commission (KPSC) has been asked to recruit 150 doctors, 73 paramedical staff and 100 nurses to the hospital, as it is the State's responsibility for appointing personnel to ESI Hospitals.

Mysuru-Kodagu MP Pratap Simha, in his address, objected to Venkataramanappa's attempts to put the blame on the Centre for the delay in execution of the hospital project.

All work and no play...

Every generation will do well in the task of grooming the succeeding generation enabling its members to carry on in life and take over both as a responsibility and a duty. The expression to carry on in life has the message of not hurting balance among the elements of nature, including all life forms, soil, air, water and the human species, almost in that order. Given the feature that conditions necessary for that elusive balance witness aberration occasionally, such as earthquakes, thunderstorms, floods, forest-fires, truant rains, epidemics and not to forget acts of anger leading to violence as well as destruction resulting in loss of life and matter, the course of aforementioned task is bound to be rough and rocky, requiring the faculties of intelligence, intuition and perseverance on the part of human beings, while other life forms have their inbuilt strength to survive and sustain themselves.

As the mantle of accepting the duty of preparing every generation towards progress in every sense of the term passes on from the ageing members of society to the young sections, one is prompted to cite two time-honoured prescriptions to be followed namely (a) upbringing and (b) education, elaborating which is beyond the scope of this column.

While upbringing has its roots in the culture and customs of the people in respective regions of the country, education, including the regimen of training, being debated and discussed in a multitude of forums by both experts and the other kind, is bound to be talked about till the sun, the stars, the planets and the moon shine in the universe, as it were. Setting the objectives of education and the means to achieve that objective are different kettles of fish, with the student fraternity playing the role of anglers in a certain sense. The issues of course of study, syllabus, textbooks appropriate for learning, pedagogy, cost and so on need to be addressed keeping the interest of students as the first charge of grooming the child on the path of growing into adult stage.

In the current dispensation of the task of grooming, stressing on scoring marks in qualifying examinations has stumped learning, as revealed by a global education survey, that 74 per cent of school students take extra tutorial lessons, prompting one to remark All work and no play made jack a dull boy, in modification of the line "All play and no work..."

EDITOR'S BOTTOMLINE

Bunny has got a new love in her life, and I'm not at all jealous. Because her new-found love is not a person but a pot. Or, to be exact, an Instant Pot. The Instant Pot — the brainchild of a Chinese-Canadian who's become a zillionaire thanks to his invention — is a device which performs seven different cookery functions, and can make everything from bread to biryani, curd to casseroles. Thanks to the Instant Pot, Bunny has rediscovered the joys of cooking. And she's not the only one. Across the world, in India and abroad, more and more people — men as well as women, with or without an Instant Pot — are taking up cooking, not as a daily chore which has to be performed to put daal-roti on the table, but as a creative hobby. In an age of fast foods and home delivery-pizza, the culinary art — and it is nothing short of an art — of making food that is not only healthy and nutritious but tastes as good as it looks is making a welcome comeback. Like the ability to sing or play a musical instrument, skill in cooking is an expression of generosity in that it gives pleasure not only to the person performing the act but to the others being treated to the result. — Jug Suraiya in The Times of India.

Engineer performs self surgery

Lancashire: An engineer from Lancashire, England, was recently in the news for performing surgery on himself to remove eight millimeters of stitches left by surgeons inside his body years ago, after operations to correct it were cancelled twice.

Graham Smith had underwent bowel surgery 15 years ago and was left with stitches protruding through the skin on his abdomen. He first brought up the issue with the hospital where he had the original surgery in 2011, but he was put on a waiting list and an operation to fix the problem was cancelled twice. Rather than waiting for his turn and risk of dying of septicaemia, the crafty engineer operated on himself, using modified titanium instruments he sourced from a dentist friend.

Believe it or not, the surgery was a success, and Smith says that after 15 years he now feels like a new man.

Trendy haircuts trimmed at school gates

Bejing: Chinese schools, which are coming up with desperate measures to enforce strict haircut policies are posting barbers at the school gates to trim long or dyed hair on the spot.

Students returning from their summer break with new haircuts to show off to their friends were greeted with a really nasty surprise right at the school entrance – a barber ready to trim any hairdos that didn't comply with regulations.

Furious students have been blasting the strict provisions enforced by Chinese schools on social media websites like Sina Weibo, with many going as far as refusing to go to school or college rather than cut their hair.

Photos posted by students of the Qinhan Secondary School, in Xi'an, China's Shaanxi province, show kids walking by piles of freshly cut hair and a scissors-wielding barber.

VOICE OF THE READER

Are drivers being given license to kill?

Sir,

The track record of accidents in India is replete with violation of traffic norms and most accidents happen due to speeding, driving under the influence of alcohol and overtaking resulting in head-on collisions.

Karnataka is ranked third at All India-level for most road accidents. The recent private bus accident claiming 30 lives is reported to be due to over-speeding. It is not surprising for the statistics show that in India nearly 80 per cent of drivers have poor driving skills which tantamount to inferring that drivers are virtually given license to kill (Mandya buses involved in accidents had poor track record SOM dated 25.11.2018).

It is also reported that this bus has changed hands several times and most appallingly the fact that despite cancellation of Fitness Certificate (FC) in 2016, if it is running for the past three years after managing to obtain FC tells its own now too familiar story of complicity of officials and the bus owner.

Apart from 1974 accident in which 15 people died, there have been deaths of 69 people in Mandya since 2008 in three major accidents, excluding 30 who died in the present accident.

It is a sad reflection of the failure of the authorities concerned in the State that despite Supreme Court issuing several instructions over the years there does not appear to be matching action and serious commitment to set up a system to stem accidents from happening.

It not only results in trauma to the relatives and friends of the accident victims but also a national economic loss.

Re-route the exit point from Railway Station on KRS Road

Sir,

The entry provided by the Railways to different Railway platforms from KRS road is of immense help to the passengers.

But when a train arrives at the platforms close to KRS Road, utter chaos prevails at the junction of KRS Road and the small road leading to the platforms.

All the vehicles enter and exit at the same point on KRS road. With a small modification, Traffic Police can totally get rid of the chaos at this junction.

All the vehicles coming out of Railway Station and going towards Vontikoppal side should compulsorily drive towards city side and then take the road opening — which is very wide — in front of CFTRI to move towards Vontikoppal side.

The opening in front of the small road leading to Railway platform should be exclusively dedicated as entry point and free right at this opening should be banned.

Traffic Police should erect a sign board indicating 'No Right Turn' near this opening opposite to the road leading to Railway platforms.

Echo of bus tragedy

Irate public stop bus for operating sans permission

Bus belongs to Minister's family

K.R. Pet, Nov.28 (Srinivas& SR)- The angry public reportedly stopped a National Travels bus owned by Minister B.Z. Zameer Ahmed Khan's family that plies between K. R. Pet and Bengaluru daily without a valid route permit and handed over the vehicle to K.R. Pet Police to take further action in this regard here yesterday. More than six buses belonging to National Travels shuttle between K.R.Pet and Bengaluru daily without any valid permit since many years.

As the situation was limping back to normalcy after the bus tragedy, privates buses resumed its operations on Tuesday. A group of people and members of Asare Samaja Seva Trust led by its President Manjunath halted the bus owned by National Travels and alerted the Police.

Sub-Inspector H.S.Venkateshprasad visited the spot and seized the bus. He also registered a case against bus driver Shivegowda. On receiving information, Nagamangala Depot Transport Officer Satish also visited the spot and booked a case against the bus operator.

Bendre scholar at Dhvanyaloka

Mysuru, Nov.28 - Dr. G. Krishnappa, retired RTO and a renowned Bendre scholar, gave a talk in Kannada on the unique use of language in Bendre's poetry recently at Dhvanyaloka on Bogadi Road in city.

In a scintillating lecture that lasted more than one-and-a half-hour, the speaker drew the attention of the audience to the most important features of Bendre's poetry that distinguished him as a class apart.

Krishnappa dwelt on the various layers of meaning that emerged from the poet's seemingly simple but complex nature of words and images. The speaker kept the listeners spellbound with both his eloquence and erudition testifying to his extensive research in this most difficult and challenging area.

Earlier, Prof. C.N. Srinath, Director, Dhvanyaloka, welcomed and introduced the speaker as "Bendre Krishnappa," a sobriquet he had earned, thanks to his contribution towards not merely writing and lecturing on Bendre but promoting him with extraordinary commitment.

CWC gives in-principle nod to State to take up DPR for Mekedatu project

Shivakumar

Bengaluru, Nov.28- Locked in confrontation with Tamil Nadu over utilisation of Cauvery waters, Karnataka heaved a sigh of relief on Tuesday with the Central Water Commission (CWC) approving the Rs.5,912 crore Mekedatu Multi-purpose Project across the Cauvery that envisages supply of drinking water to Bengaluru and Ramanagaram districts, besides generation of power. The CWC has now asked the State Government in-principle to prepare and submit a Detailed Project Report (DPR).

While the project was conceived in 2013, the State Government decided to implement the project in Feb. 2017. The project involves building of a balancing reservoir across the Cauvery with a storage capacity of 66 tmcft at Mekedatu in Kanakapura taluk of Ramanagaram district.

The project will also have a provision to generate about 400 MW of power apart from meeting the drinking water needs of Bengaluru, Ramanagaram and other towns in the vicinity. The reservoir will store only excess water after release of Tamil Nadu's share during copious rains, which otherwise will drain into Bay of Bengal.

Tamil Nadu's objection

Soon as the CWC cleared Karnataka's report on Mekedatu Project, Tamil Nadu has opposed it on the grounds that the project violates the Cauvery Water Disputes Tribunal award.

Tamil Nadu Chief Minister Edappadi K. Palaniswami on Tuesday wrote to Prime Minister Narendra Modi seeking to instruct the CWC to withdraw the permission given to Karnataka as it was in violation of the Cauvery Tribunal final award.

Claiming that the proposal for the reservoir was not just for drinking water but also to increase the extent of irrigation, which is in violation of the award, Palaniswami also contended that the project will deny Tamil Nadu of its share of water from Cauvery river.

Reacting to TN's objection, Karnataka Water Resources Minister D.K. Shivakumar said that the project is meant for only drinking water purpose and there will not be any impact on the water to be released to Tamil Nadu.

Pandavapura Bus Tragedy: Special class saves lives of 20 students of Vadesamudra village

Otherwise they too would have been travelling in the ill-fated 'Rajakumara'

Students who were saved from watery grave as they were attending special classes on the fateful Saturday. Picture right shows one of the lucky students with her family members.

Mandya, Nov.28 (Nagaiah& SR)- When people of Vadesamudra and other villages of Pandavapura taluk are still struggling to come out of the shock following the ill-fated 'Rajakumara' bus tragedy, special classes saved lives of 20 students of Vadesamudra village of Pandavapura taluk, who are studying at Chikkabyadarahalli Composite PU College.

The private bus, which was on its way from Pandavapura to Mandya, fell into Visvesvaraya Canal near Kanaganamaradi at Pandavapura taluk, killing 30 people including school children, women and an infant. Eight victims of the tragedy were from Vadesamudra village and rest of them are from Chikkakoppal, Kanaganamaradi and other surrounding villages.

The bus, which was taking a right turn, toppled into the Canal while travelling at 40-50 kmph at around 12 pm on Saturday last. Thousands of people made a beeline for the accident spot as news of the bus falling in the Canal spread like wildfire throughout the district.

On that fateful day, over 20 students of Vadesamudra village were attending special classes — Eight college students were attending special class taken by their Economics lecturer Gopinath and 12 High School students were attending the special class conducted by their Science teacher Shalini — which saved their lives.

These students would have got into this ill-fated bus to reach Vadesamudra, if their teachers had not taken the special classes after Saturday afternoon. However, the villagers of Vadesamudra expressed gratitude for these teachers for saving the lives of these children.

Pall of gloom continues to prevail

A pall of gloom continues to descend on Vadesamudra village and villagers are still making efforts to come out of the shock.

An eerie silence and sadness still prevailed in every house of the village as the maximum number of victims of the bus tragedy belonged to Vadesamudra.

Residents seem to be cursing God for their fate and many villagers had left eating and are even distracted from their daily chores.

Children fear to go to school

As many students of the village were killed in the accident, several parents are now afraid to send their children to school. Even children are hesitating to go to school and have decided not to attend classes for another 15 days until they come out of the shock.

Pet Talk

Maneka Gandhi

My neighbours do not want me to look after the animals on our street. What do I do?

You don't wear clothes and eat according to what your neighbours want. So why should you tailor your acts of compassion according to them. Please do not get deterred due to certain individuals. I know it is very discouraging if people of a locality foolishly hate Indian dogs and the people who look after them, but they should realise that you are protecting them by feeding and looking after dogs. A hungry sick wounded dog is dangerous. There is no law in the Constitution of India that prohibits people from looking after strays. However, you should not feed them non-vegetarian food as it leaves a stink. You should not feed them in front of people's houses as they might get upset. And you should pick up their faeces if it is near any of the houses. There are scoopers that you can get which are easy to use. You could feed them at a designated area — the Supreme Court has ruled that every colony has to designate areas for feeding. Put collars on all of them so that they are known as colony dogs.

How do I take a stray dog to the vet?

Firstly, thank you for being a good person. Each person looks after his own possessions. Few people go out to look after the world, specially the most helpless beings in it. Gently approach the dog and make it feel reassured that you mean no harm. You could do so by offering food and water. Once you are sure that the dog trusts you, you can approach the dog. If the dog is unknown, you could use a net. Then muzzle the dog using rags or a cloth. Do so by wrapping the cloth around the jaw and tie a bow behind the ears.

• For lifting the dog, if the dog is small, cradle the neck with one hand and place your other arm over its back and around its body. Hold the dog, like a baby.

• If the dog is large, slip one arm under the neck, and place your other arm under the stomach. Lift with both arms.

• If the dog is very large, slip one arm under the neck, holding the chest in the crook of your arm. Place your other arm under the dog's rump and, pressing your arms toward one another, lift the dog.

• In case a stretcher is needed, use a flat board or a blanket. Use a flat board if you suspect a broken back.

Finally, transport the dog to the vet. Bring it back if necessary and keep it in your verandah or house if it is still too sick. Feed it regularly and give it the medicine it needs till it is well.

Is dogfighting legal?

Dogfighting is a blood sport where two dogs fight against each other in a pit for the entertainment of the spectators. It is extremely cruel. It is done simply to watch two starved, wounded dogs fight. It is illegal under The Prevention of Cruelty to Animals Act, 1960, and the Supreme Court of India has passed a law that dogfights, cockfights and bullfights are illegal, and has asked each State to take stringent steps to eradicate this practice. If you encounter dogfighting, cockfighting or bullfighting anywhere, report it to the Police.

My three weeks old puppy has a lump on her belly. Is this a malignant tumour? Do I need to go to vet?

Lumps found on the abdomen of puppies are usually umbilical hernias. They are not dangerous. The abdomen of most animals is made up of the organs inside it, a layer of fatty tissue and then layers of muscle. These muscle layers are joined by a white strip of strong connective tissue. Sometimes, this strong white line is not complete and there is a gap. Through this gap, some of the contents of the abdomen may poke through and be felt as a soft lump around the region where your dog's belly button (umbilicus) would be found. There is nothing to worry about this. However, if the lump is found in some other location, and you suspect that it is a tumour, take him/ her to the vet. Benign tumours usually occur in old dogs and very rarely in puppies. If the lump changes size or secretes fluids, then it might be a malignant tumour and you should immediately get him/ her checked.

KEEPING IT WARM: Red Munia, also known as Red Avadavat or Strawberry Finch, collecting feathers for the inner-lining of its nest to keep the young ones warm. [Pic. by M.N. Lakshminarayana Yadav]

Can I move a bird's nest, with eggs in it, because I sense danger?

It is a myth that parent birds abandon their young ones or eggs if they've been touched by a human. Birds do not have a strong sense of smell. They rely on their eyes and ears for locating their nests. However, if a bird senses the danger of predation it prefers not to spend energy on protecting the nest and, instead, abandons the nest.

If you sense danger, you can relocate the nest to a safer region. Try and do it with the parents watching. Observe closely to ensure that the birds find their way back to the nest, and then leave it undisturbed so that they can feel safe in it.

How to identify internal bleeding in a bird?

Internal bleeding can be caused due to collisions or malfunctioning of the body organs. It is often difficult to identify. If a bird has difficulty breathing — usually under such circumstances they open and close their beaks since they're using their mouth to breathe — it is probably due to an internal injury. Other signs include an unbalanced walk, inability to keep head straight up, sleepiness, change in colour of droppings and sometime even bleeding from the mouth. You should rush it to the vet if you suspect internal bleeding.

How should I treat leg paralysis in birds?

The causes differ, depending on your bird and his age or health status. It usually affects either in one leg or both limbs, rendering your bird helpless. Some birds can recover in a few days, others take much longer, or they may succumb to the disease that caused it.

Unfortunately there are very few vets in this country who know anything about birds. So, if you are foolish enough to keep a bird in a cage, then you should do some reading. A vet might be able to rule out certain diseases or deficiencies and then make an analysis of the remaining facts and symptoms.

It is easier to treat a disease in its initial stages than to try and attack it once it has established itself. Your veterinarian, or avian specialist, will examine your bird and ask about its history. They will want to know the type of home your bird has (aviary or cage, indoor or outdoor), whether any other birds are showing signs of paralysis, and what type of diet your bird is on.

Sometimes it can just be limited access to natural sunlight causing a nutritional deficiency (Vitamin D). Birds on the same diet, day in and day out, may also have malnutrition in some vital areas. Diagnosis is made by excluding other causes of the disease. Tests for viral or disease in footprints will allow him to determine what is causing your birds suffering. Often radiography, haematology, faecal smears and other such tests, will be done to determine the cause.

The treatment will vary depending on the cause of your bird's condition, but even more so it will depend on the health or visible symptoms that are apparent. In a lot of cases, the exact cause is unknown, so treatment begins with treating obvious signs such as infections. Broad spectrum antibiotics can cure a bacterial cause. A change of diet and added supplements can help build up a weakened immune system or nutritional deficiency.

Adding full spectrum lamps to provide healthy UVA and UVB rays during winter can help your bird. Corticosteroids and vitamin injections may be required, or fluid therapy during the first 24-48 hours by injection may help.

If your bird's foot is clenched, the veterinarian may suggest exercising the foot by gently stretching it open to its normal shape, then moving the legs around as though it was bicycling. This may help the limb to restore the blood flow and get the leg moving again. There is no known 'paralysis' cure, it is a matter or excluding other causes and then making a treatment to suit the remaining facts. For some birds that are totally paralysed, you have to consider the quality of life and make the decision whether it may not be kinder to put the bird to sleep. If it is an aggressive disease, supportive care is the only solution.

Some birds can recover fully in a few days or weeks. Your bird may remain with a clenched foot due to the paralysis, and it can live a relatively normal life. Birds tend to accept things and get on with life, and to date, there are no studies on how long a bird with a clenched foot will live.

Universities in the country are in pathetic condition: Prof. B.K. Chandrashekar

Betsurmath and others are seen.

Mysuru, Nov.28 (MK&NNN)- The Universities in the country are in a pathetic condition as they have lost their autonomous status, regretted former Primary and Secondary Education Minister Prof. B.K. Chandrashekar.

He was speaking after distributing degree certificates to the students at the 11th Graduates Day of JSS College of Arts, Commerce and Science on Bengaluru-Nilgiris Road, here yesterday and said that change was required in education system and the Universities should see that they get the work done from students in all fields. This will help students gain new experience and thinking.

If the Post Graduate students have not thought to do research, then education will not have any meaning, he added.

There is relentless discussion in the media about the economic condition of the country. Commerce students must debate about issues like demonetisation and Goods and Services Tax (GST) about which there are both positive and negative impact. The students must involve themselves in practical experiments and teachers must encourage them. Just reading old standard text books will not help, he said.

There should be intense debates and thinking about burning issues in the country in the Universities and along with it research must also go on. For this to happen there must be a synergy between science, technology and society, he said.

The opposition not to bring personal beliefs in the ambit of the law is rising and they are asking not to interfere in superstitious beliefs. The examples for this are the Ram Mandir-Babri Masjid and Sabarimala disputes. As a result there is lot of unrest in the country. We should all be aware of our laws and hence everyone must read the Constitution which talks about secularism. It is regrettable that even after 70 years we are asking people to read the Constitution, said Prof. Chandrashekar.

The Rotary Journey:

To S. Korea and Japan —2

The world is a book and those who do not travel read only one page."

—St. Augustine

This is my second visit to Seoul and Tokyo. Twenty-nine years ago in June 1989, I had been to Seoul along with the Rotary team to attend the Rotary International Conference. Earlier to this, the 24th Olympic Games was held in Seoul from 17th September to 2nd October, 1988. From there, we went to Tokyo in Japan.

As we know, Korea was a country that suffered during the World War II leading to a Civil War in 1950. Later Korea was divided with North Korea going the Communist way with the support of China and Soviet Union, while America and the United Kingdom halted the march of Communist to South at the 39th Parallel, now known as South Korea.

Think of this. In just 38 years after the devastation of the Civil War, South Korea had surged forward economically so much that it could hold the world's most prestigious Olympic Games successfully.

In contrast, look at India. After 71 years of independence and peace (except for minor China and Pakistan wars) we were not even able to conduct the Asian Games successfully making a mess of it both the times that we hosted. And to think of holding the Olympic Games should be a far-far away dream despite our country being many-many times bigger than South Korea. I had visited the Olympic Stadia and the Olympic Village with my Rotarian friend Chikka Venkatappa, Physical Director of Mysore University. What we saw left us with nothing but admiration for S. Korea while feeling ashamed of ourselves

The holding of Olympic Games, a visionary decision by the rulers of South Korea, had led to the rush of tourists to that country in hordes throughout the year. Geographically, South Korea is located in an advantageous position close to Japan across the sea. As a result, though Korea was not the preferred destination for many tourists, because of its proximity to Japan, those who go to Japan as tourists include Korea also in the itinerary. In truth, South Korea is not a country of places with tourist interest except perhaps for the Ginseng, the sex tonic. About it later.

South Korea is known as the 'Land of Morning Calm' just as Japan is known as the 'Land of the Rising Sun.' As we know, before the World War II, Japan was an imperial power having occupied Korea till the end of World War II in 1945. It has a population less than that of Karnataka — 5.15 crore in 2017. The United Korea was an empire with a King until it was occupied by Japan in 1910. In one sense, the World War II was a blessing in disguise specially for South Korea. Though basically an agricultural country, its economy is driven by giant industries — Samsung, LG, Hyundai and entertainment industry. There is a Gangnam Street. Remember the Gangnam style dance going viral in Social Media?

The aspiration to become one country by uniting the North and South Korea was all pervasive in South Korea and it must be so even in North Korea where this aspiration cannot be expressed because of the totalitarian Communist rule. At the base ticketing area this aspiration was visually expressed with a sculpture. (See picture above)

The word DMZ is the first one to roll out of the lips of our Guide and it was repeated so very often till we moved to another tourist destination. DMZ simply means 'Demilitarized Zone,' which is considered one of the most heavily armed borders in the world. When I had gone there with the Rotary friends in 1989, I was thoroughly disappointed. Our coach was driven up a small hill on a narrow road with forest cover and gun-totting army men in their uniform were seen standing guard on either side of the road. The coach stopped at a point and the Guide was on a hyperbolic monologue giving the impression that a war would break out even as our coach was driving back to our hotel.

For once, I visualised our army deployment in Kashmir, Sikkim (Nathu La Pass) and Arunachal Pradesh to be of greater interest for a tourist (if allowed) than the one I saw at the DMZ. Hats off to the officials of the Tourism Department of South Korea.

Now, let me turn the clock to the present. This time there were, well-laid, four-lane roads and a parking-lot from where you climb the gradient to reach the peak of the hillock. Here a building is constructed which is a 'View Point' with a few binoculars. There is also a small museum, well-appointed toilets and a rest place. There was also a dispensing machine of packed food items and beverages. Tourists look across the North Korean border area where you see some trucks and vehicles parked or moving in the thin forest of almost a deserted area. It was a case of the well-known phrase in english language, "making a mountain out of a mole hill" and this could not have been more axiomatic. I was left wondering how an otherwise prosaic place — boring and unimportant for a tourist — is made a must-see tourist destination. The next important destination for a tourist is the gigantic vertical metropolis, the Lotte World Tower with 123 floors with a height of 555 mts. The day was over.

India to top job market in next 30 years: Moily

Moily called upon the Universities, colleges and schools to change the syllabus every year if world class citizens have to be produced as they will then have a proper view of the universe.

Moily revealed that when he was the Education Minister he had appointed 12 lakh teachers with not an iota of corruption taking place. He also called upon the Backward Classes to shed the inferiority complex and prove that they are as intelligent as others.

Renovated ESI Hospital

Pointing out that the NDA Government had released Rs. 9 crore to complete the building, which was delayed due to complaints on shoddy and sub-standard works and financial irregularities, Simha said that there were some technical hurdles in handing over the hospital entirely to the State Government.

Regretting shortage of medical and other staff at the Hospital, the MP said that the State Government should comply with the norms laid out under the ESI Act in managing the Hospital.

Stating that the Mysuru ESI Hospital has asked the Centre to sanction Rs. 13.23 crore for installation of modern medical equipment, the MP directed the Hospital authorities to submit an estimate with item- wise breakup so that he could follow it up with the Centre and get 75 percent of the funds sanctioned immediately while the rest has to be borne by the State. The new Hospital has the much-needed lift facility, he added.

Chamarajanagar MP R. Dhruvanarayan, who also spoke, said that the Hospital building has been completed now with additional funds of Rs. 9 crore by the Centre.

Stressing on the need for providing comprehensive medical services to all ESI beneficiaries, the MP regretted that the new ESI Hospital that has come up at Nanjangud has been waiting for installation of medical equipment.

Calling upon both the State and Central Governments to see that the Nanjangud ESI Hospital becomes functional at the earliest as the town is an important Industrial Centre, providing jobs to thousands of people, Dhruvanarayan said it was the responsibility of every Government to ensure health for all. Chamaraja MLA L. Nagendra presided.

Mandya MP L.R. Shivaramegowda, ZP President Nayeema Sulthana, MLAs Tanveer Sait and M. Ashwin Kumar, ESIC member K.V. Shekar Raju, Corporators SBM Manju and Guruvinayak, ESIC Medical Commissioner Dr. P.L. Chaudhury, State Labour Commissioner S. Palaiah and others were present.

The 100-bed renovated ESI Hospital will cater to the medical needs of about 1,27,000 ESIC beneficiaries from six districts of Mysuru, Mandya, Hassan, Chikkamagalur, Chamarajanagar and Kodagu.

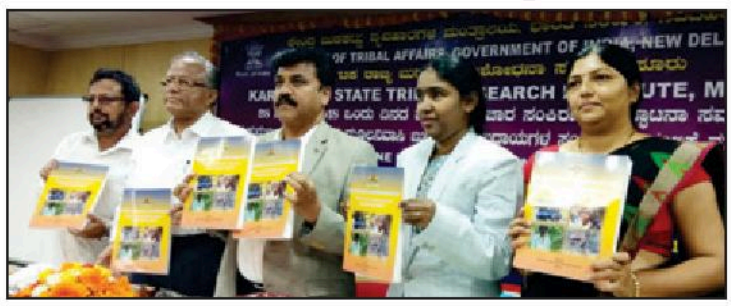
Govt. benefits not reaching vulnerable tribals: Expert



Assistant Professor of Hampi Kannada University Dr. Tarahalli Hanumanthaiah, Prof. C.G. Hussain Khan, Director Prof. T.T. Basavanagowda, Deputy Director S. Prathiba, Research Officer H.N. Gayathri are seen releasing annual reports brought out at one- day regional seminar at Administrative Training Institute, Nazarbad, in city this morning.

Mysuru, Nov. 28 (MTY&SR)- Prof. C.G. Hussain Khan, Professor Emeritus, Department of Anthropology, Karnatak University, Dharwad, regretted that the benefits given by successive governments at the Centre and State for the welfare of tribals were not reaching the targeted community.

He was speaking at the one-day regional seminar on customs, beliefs and practises of Jenukuruba and Koraga, particularly vulnerable tribal groups in Karnataka, at Administrative Training Institute (ATI), Nazarbad, in city this morning.

He said that 8 per cent of the population of the nation were tribals. India has the second highest number of tribal population in the world. There are 705 tribes settled across the country. Unfortunately, the benefits announced by the governments are enjoyed by the tribals settled in semi-urban and rural pocketed areas, but not by tribal groups like Jenukurubas, Koragas and others settled in tribal hamlets in the fringes of forest or inside the forest.

Though the Governments had implemented several programmes for welfare of tribals under five-year plan, schemes like Mahatama Gandhi Rural Employment Guarantee Scheme (MNREGS), National Rural Health Mission (NHRM) and other such programmes, the life of vulnerable tribal groups have not yet improved since independence.

Currently, the government has been implementing uniform schemes for welfare of tribals. As different groups of tribals are practising different customs, beliefs and tradition, the programmes implemented by the government have not bore fruits, he said. Hence, he suggested the government to introduce a centralised and specific targeted tribal welfare programmes for empowerment of vulnerable tribal groups.

Census of Jenukurubas

In his address, Director of Karnataka State Tribal Research Institute, Prof. T.T. Basavanagowda said that the State government has been conducting socio-economic census of vulnerable tribal groups' population in forested areas. The census report has almost reached finishing stage and it will be submitted to the government shortly.

He said Karnataka has more than 75 different tribes. Vulnerable tribal groups like Koragas are settled in large numbers at Dakshina Kannada and Udupi districts while Jenukurubas resided in huge numbers in forest areas of Mysuru, Chamarajanagar and Kodagu districts. The socio-economic census study of vulnerable tribal groups will help the government to come up with community specific empowerment schemes and programmes, he said.

'Social entrepreneurship is transforming business, society and self'

Dr. Anthony Jensen, Conjoint Lecturer, Newcastle Business School, New South Wales, Australia, who was felicitated by SBRR Mahajana First Grade College at its premises recently, seen with (from left) Mahajana Education Society Hon. Secretary Dr. Vijayalakshmi Muralidhar, BBM Head of the Department Dr. Shyla, University of Mysore PMEB Director Prof. Yashavantha Dongre, Mahajana First Grade College PG Wing Director Dr. C.K. Renukarya, CEO and Academic Advisor Dr. S.R. Ramesh, Bahadur Institute of Management Sciences Liaison Officer P. S. Prasad, B.Com Head of the Department M.S. Rashmi Urs and Economics Head of the Department Venkatalakshmi.

Mysuru, Nov. 28 (NNN)- "We live in an age of profound disruption, where something is ending and dying and something else is wanting to be reborn," said Dr. Anthony Jensen, Conjoint Lecturer, Newcastle Business School, New South Wales, Australia.

He was speaking at a lecture and interaction session organised by SBRR Mahajana First Grade College, on 'Social Entrepreneurship and the Asian Century' here recently.

Dr. Jensen spoke about transforming business, society and self and pointed out at the rapid far-reaching and unprecedented changes in all aspects of society and said that to do these transitions requires the next ten years.

Talking about social entrepreneurs as drivers to transform the society with a value proposition, he gave an overview of emergence of Asian context of social enterprise with decline of west, end of liberalism, end of long journey of developed countries, rise of Asia and Global Financial Crisis.

He touched on Asian Capitalism in the context of five major types of business systems in Asia such as post socialist, advanced city, emerging South East Asia, advanced North East Asia and Japanese.

The lecture was reviewed by the discussants who put across their view as follows:

The first discussant Dr. C. K. Renukarya, Director, SBRR Mahajana First Grade College, PG Wing, gave a view that India stands out to be a special, huge and diversified economy dominated by rural sector and agriculture being one of the top most occupation of the people, branded as a poor nation but spiritually strong.

"Capitalism is no longer desirable system in the world. India deserves a model envisioned by Mahatma Gandhi that is the hybrid system of Socialism and Capitalism where every human being becomes productive, is capable of earning and spending something and be happy. Hybrid of public and private sector and a huge third sector consisting of small scale and cottage industries will be the best system for India," he said.

The second discussant Dr. Yashavantha Dongre, Director, PMEB (Planning Management Evaluation Board), University of Mysore, began with an example of SELKO, a Bangalore-based enterprise which operates in more than twelve countries and is a cent percent business organisation which deals with alternative energy that is solar energy equipment.

He said, "This is a true social enterprise because a social need is converted into a business opportunity. India is seen as a fertile land for these types of social enterprises where NGOs are getting converted into social enterprise. Collapse of capitalism and end of liberalism in the global setup will lead to an opportunity for new system that is social enterprise which is going to occupy the vacant space," and added, "emergence of social enterprise will be a real alternative economic system."

Mahajana Education Society Hon. Secretary Dr. Vijayalakshmi Muralidhar, SBRR Mahajana First Grade College CEO and Academic Advisor Dr. S. R. Ramesh, staff, students and invitees were present.

Kumaraswamy

Speaking at a review meeting with Regional Commissioners, Deputy Commissioners and ZP Chief Executive Officers (CEO) at Vidhana Soudha, the CM directed the officials to collect all details related to loan waiver scheme before Dec.1.

Urging the DCs to keep middlemen outside while implementing the loan waiver scheme, the Chief Minister said that the Government has completed the formalities to implement the farm loan waiver scheme.

As many as 4,000 farmers have submitted affidavits in Sedam and Doddaballapur where the pilot project is being implemented, he said while also directing the officials to protect street vendors from harassment by money lenders.

Later speaking to press persons, Kumaraswamy said that his Government had achieved 90-92 percent progress in collecting information from Banks on crop loans that the farmers had borrowed.

"So far, we have collected information on crop loans borrowed by 20.80 lakh farmers from 33 Public Sector Banks and 21 lakh farmers from Co-operative Banks. Funds will be released to the Banks based on this information," he said while hitting out at Prime Minister Narendra Modi for criticising his loan waiver scheme, which is pegged at Rs.45,000 crore.

WORD OF THE DAY

Threnody

Pronunciation: Thre-nə-de.

Meaning: A song of lamentation for the dead, elegy.
Origin: Threnody encompasses all genres. There are great threnodies in prose (such as the lines from Charles Dickens' Bleak House upon the death of Little Jo: "Dead, your Majesty. Dead, my lords and gentlemen. Dead"), in poetry (as in W. H. Auden's "Funeral Blues": "The stars are not wanted now: put out every one, Pack up the moon and dismantle the sun"), and in music (Giovanni Pergolesi's "Stabat Mater," for one). Threnody, which we borrowed from the Greek word thrēnōidia (from thrēnos, the word for "dirge") has survived in English since the early 1600s. Melody, tragedy, and comedy are related to threnody through the Greek root that forms their ending-aeidein, which means "to sing."
Example: They sang a threnody for the dead person; the film concludes with a threnody about the unwanted.

THE ODD WORD

Tellurian

An inhabitant of the earth.

PHRASE OF THE DAY

Take a punt

Meaning: To take a chance, to attempt or try something, to bet.
Origin: To take a punt literally means to make a bet and derives from the betting language of the 18th century. In France, the player betting against the bank would shout out "ponte" and in Spain it was "punto." These words were later integrated into the betting language in the UK, and the word punt started appearing more and more frequently at the croupier table.
Example: My sister took the punt and decided to propose to her boyfriend. They have been happily married for 10 years now.
